The story is going the rounds as to how to exterminate the potato bug by placing a few grains of fax seed in the hill when planting. The Britt Tribune gives this as the probable solution: "The bug crawls up the vine and in the darkness of early dawn mistakes and eats the flax instead of the potato. The flax seed makes him so slippery he can't stok to the vine, he falls off, slides along on the ground blown by the wind, until the friction wears a hole through his side, his vitals are exposed to the weather, mortification sets in and the bug passes away. Some plant red peppers in the hills and the bug sneezes his head off. Another way is to plant ginger root in the hill, the bug throws his head back to cough, he loses his footing and falls, breaking his neck." What Food Did for a Clergyman

A minister of Elizabethtown tells how Grape-Nuts food brought him back to his pulpit: "Some 5 years ago I had an attack of what seemed to be La Grippe which left me in a complete state of collapse and I suffered for some time with nervous prostration. My appetite failed, I lost flesh till I was a mere skeleton, life was a burden to me, I lost interest in everything and ilmost in every body save my precious

Then on the recommendation of some friends I began to use Grape-Nuts food. At that time I was a miserable skeleton, without appetite and hardly able to walk across the room; had ugly dreams at night, no disposi-tion to entertain or be entertained and began to shun society. "I finally gave up the regular ministry, indeed I could not collect my thoughts on any subject, and became almost a hermit. After I had been using the Grape-Nuts food for a short time I discovered that I was taking on new life and my appetite began to improve; I began to sleep better and my weight increased steadily; I had lost some 50 pounds but under the new food regime I have regained almost my former weight and have greatly improved in every way.

"I feel that I owe much to Grape-Nuts and can truly recommend the food to all who require a powerful re-building agent delicious to taste and al-ways welcome." MOST REMARKABLE OF DIVORCE CASES

The Hartie Contest at Pittsburg And Some of the Causes For Bringing It.

PUBLIC WITH THE WOMAN.

Even Her Own Sex, Which is Always Willing to Condemn in Such Cases Believes in Her.

Pittsburg, Pa .- No divorce case which has ever occupied the time of an American court has attracted so widespread attention as has this trial.

The unprintable charges made by the millionaire husband, the sensational answers, the arrest of Augustus Hartje and John L. Weishons, one of the best known business men in Pittsburg, on a charge of conspiring with Chifford Hooe, a negro, to destrop the good name and reputation of Mrs. Hartje, the dragging in of the names of several of the city's wealthlest and most respected business men and the announcement by the district attorney that he will prosecute on criminal charges the conspirators in the case have made this one of the most remarkable issues ever tried in this

The Hartjes were a respectable old German family of Allegneny. Mrs. Hartje, mother of Augustus Hartje, owned a little paper mill in Steuben-ville. O. When sne died she left this mili to her sons, and Augustus Hartje became its manager. It did a fairly good business in the manufacture of wrapping paper, bags, etc.

Capital was needed to develop the business, and this was finally supplied when Hartje married Miss Mary Scott, daughter of John F. Scott, a Pittsburg contractor. Mr. Scott was a compara tively well-to-do man, and he so assisted his son-in-law that the Hartje mill grew to large proportions and is today one of the largest independent concerns in the country. The mill is valued at $1,000,000. In addition to this, Hartje is the owner of 26 pieces of Pittsburg realty in the downtown district, and a mod ern 12-story office building worth $500. It is safe to say that Augustus Hartje is well up in the millionaire class, largely due, it is said, to the as-sistance given him by his father-in-

The Scotts belong to a family which has been among the empire builders for several generations. Thomas Scott president of the Pennsylvania railroad in its earlier days and was a partner of Andrew Carnegie when he first engaged in the steel business. The Hartjes were Germans. The Scotts were Scotch and Irish. There could scarcely have been found a more illmated couple than Mary Scott and Augustus Hartje. She is now 32 years of age. He is 48. They have been married 15 years, so she was little more than a girl when she plighted her troth to him. The Hartjes were always of the German saving class. A silver dollar looked bigger to Augustus Hartje than a $1,000 bill to the Scott family. They had saved in pennies, and the habit stuck to them after the noney began to come in rolls.

Mrs. Hartje is one of the most beaufull of life, she was admired everywhere she went. Augustus Hartje was insanely jealous of his young wife. He rea-lized the disparity in their ages. Per-haps he also realized that he, at least, had entered into the marriage as a sort of business arrangement and that little real love existed. Mrs. Hartje, however, says she loved her husband and always tried to be a good and faithful

She was certainly a good housekeeper. It is not many wives of millionaires who will go into the kitchen on wash day and cook the meals for the servants and the entire household. At pre-serving time she was always busy put-ting up fruits and fellies. She even rendered lard, a nauseating task to which the wives of most workingmen would object. She was a good housekeeper and was always proud of the ability to cook.

She belonged to no women's clubs. wrote no essays on the influence of Ba-con on Shakespeare, attended no congresses to discuss ways and means of ameliorating the condition of the hea-then. She just attended strictly to her home duties and raised her two children, a boy and girl, and they are as sweet and well-behaved little ones as one could find anywhere. It is difficult to believe that two such youngsters can be the children of a mother who is the creature Augustus Hartje paints her in his libel in divorce.

But his jealousy took the pleasure out of that diversion. If any male member f the club spoke pleasantly to his wife engaged her in conversation for a minutes at a time, Hartje imme liately formed the opinion there was something back of it all. He never made any, direct charges of ill-doing igainst his wife during these years. He ust allowed them to fester Inside of him until the break came,

The day Augustus Hartje and his wife returned to Pittsburg after their European trip the same amiable relations seemed to exist between his wife and his brothers and eleters. But a w days after their return another quarrel took place between Augustus Hartje and his wife. She announced that she had been insulted by him for the last time. She took her children and went to the home of her father. Hartje did not believe she would stay, Soon he sent his brother, Edward Hartje, an attorney, to intercede, Mrs. Hartje told Edward her mind could not be changed. She had left her husband forever. He went a second time; no change. Her husband sent a neighbor. Mrs. Flocum, but the wife's determination could not be shaken. nnounced she was going to sue for When Augustus Hartje finally b came convinced his wife would return to him he filed suit for divor-est October, and the charges he ma startled the country. He accused wife of intimacy with Clifford Honegro coachman who had been e ployed by Hartje. He also named T Madine, their white coachman, as c respondent. Hooe, it was announce was preparing to leave the city as his testimony was taken. His deposi-tion was the most hideous story ever apread upon the records of a divorce court. If its averments are true, Mrs. Hartje should be in an insane asylum. . . .

He said he had been himed h Hartje to make the deposition and then hurried away from the city kept in hiding by Hartje. ed to Pennsylvania without requisitly papers, and was kept in jair hearing, after he had pleaded guilty before the grand jury.

The arrest of Hooe and his confes-sion was a terrible blow to Hartje. His attorneys made strenuous efforts secure the negro's release on a writ of habeas corpus. It was at the hearing on the application for this writ that Asst. Dist. Atty, John S. Robb, Jr., walked into court and made his start. ling announcement that he

Failing to receive the release of the negro, Hartje dropped him out of the case altogether. The attorneys on his side have been exceedingly careful to exclude every mention of the negro in the trial of the case. The defense laments this sorely, as Mrs. Hartje's attorneys would have found their case easier if they had been able to bring in this negro and have him tell his story of how he was paid to make his deposition. Hartje admits having paid him money. He cannot help admitting it, for the defense has the applications was out of the city. In all, the negro says, he got about $500 from Hartje. He was to get $5,000, he says, to help seure the divorce.

After the negro's perfury had been exposed, Hartje presented a supplementary petition to court. He alleged his wife had, on several occasions, visited the Hotel Lincoln in company with a man whose name he would prove at the trial. He also alleged his wife had for years visited a disorderly estab-lishment in Watson street, this city, where she entertained her admirers. . . .

The managers of the Hotel Lincoln which is owned by Henry Phipps and is one of the finest hotels in the state, asserted Mrs. Hartje had never visited the hotel, either alone or in company with a man. Mrs. Hartje said she had never been in the place. Hartje was ordered by the court to place the name of the co-respondent in his bill on the record. He refused to do so, and later backed down completely. He has not attempted to present any of this evidence in the trial. His attorneys announced that he had decided to abandon it because the evidence, if submit ted, would simply result in disgracing two more families an be the beginning of two more divorce suits. They did not wish to stir up such a scandal, they explained. Then the innocent public asked why Hartje was so careful of the bonor of these families when he had damned his own by naming a negro as co-respondent in his divorce case, when re declared he could name respected white men of his own social standing.

There has not been a line in all these months when there was not at least seven men working under the direction of Gilbert B. Perkins, gathering evidence for Mrs. Hart-je. Some have said it will cost John Scott his entire fortune. He is worth probably $250,000. If it takes every cent and he clears his daughter's name he will be happy. "I'll just go to work again in my old age," he said. Hartje is heartily sick of it. He has est at least twenty-five pounds since the case began last summer. He is almost a physical and nervous wreck.

Harije is said to regret how that he did not agree to a separation when his wife first left his house. This trial will cost him as much or more than he would have had to pay before he ever made the charges he filed.
